THE UNITED STATES OF AMERICA

IN SENATE
JANUARY 10, 1906
REPORT
OF THE
COMMISSIONER OF THE GENERAL LAND OFFICE
ON THE
LANDS BELONGING TO THE UNITED STATES

1906

CONTENTS

INTRODUCTION

The Commission on the General Land Office was organized by the Secretary of the Interior in 1898, and has since that time been engaged in a study of the public lands of the United States. The Commission has held numerous public hearings, and has received many suggestions from the public. It has also conducted extensive research into the various problems connected with the management of the public lands. The results of this research are set forth in this report.

The Commission has found that the public lands of the United States are of great value to the Nation, and that they should be managed in a way that will secure the greatest benefit to the people. It has therefore recommended that the public lands be placed under the control of a single department, and that a system of public lands management be established.

The Commission has also found that the public lands are being rapidly depleted, and that it is necessary to take prompt action to prevent this. It has therefore recommended that the public lands be protected by a system of national parks and monuments, and that the public lands be managed in a way that will secure the greatest benefit to the people.

RECOMMENDATIONS

The Commission recommends that the public lands of the United States be placed under the control of the Department of the Interior, and that a system of public lands management be established. It also recommends that the public lands be protected by a system of national parks and monuments, and that the public lands be managed in a way that will secure the greatest benefit to the people.
